MERICAN PRESBYTERIANISM

Presbytery, 1706
The first Presbytery was organized in Philadelphia in 1706.

Old Side / New Side. 1741-1758

During the first Great Awakening, Presbyterians split over the issue of revivals. Gilbert Tennent's 1740 pro-revival sermon "The Danger of an Unconverted Ministry' decried anti-revivalists as Pharisees and blind men The minister John Hancock responded with 1743's "The Danger of an Unqualified Ministry" Unable to contain the dispute the church solit into the revivalist New Side and the anti-revivalist Old Side. Seeking what Tennent called "the Peace of Jerusalem", the factions reunited to form the Synod of

Cumberland Presbyterian Church, 1810-1906

In 1810, objecting to the denomination's requirement that ordained ministers be formally educated, and disputing the necessity to assent to the Westminster Confession, a group of Kentucky ministers withdrew from the PCUSA to form the independent Cumberland Presbytery. The presbytery grew into the Cumberland Synod by 1813, and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church by 1829. In 1906, roughly two-thirds of the denomination reunited with the PCUSA.

In response to the Second Great Awakening, Presbyterians split once again over revivals and the primacy of the Westminster Standards. At the General Assembly of 1837 in Philadelphia, the Synods of Western Reserve, Utica, Geneva, and Genesee were refused entry. They left to hold a separate assembly nearby, constituting the New School. Ecclesiastical and theological differences were ultimately trumped by the national division over slavery, and the Old School and New School reunited in 1869.

Synod, 1833-1965
Throughout the 18th century, Reformed Presbyterianism held that any state governed by a document which did not declare the supremacy of Jesus Christ was illegitimate. Reformed Presbyterians therefore abstained from voting, jury service, and political activity. In 1833 the Reformed Presbyterian Church in North America separated into Old Light and Ne Light factions over this stance. New Lights found civic activity nemissible.
